Presentation of the project to our client

On Saturday, July 15, 2023, at 11 in the morning, the project was present to our client with the changes required by the dentistry doctor Nelly Amaya and with the introduction of the graphical interface to the program, which allows it to be more didactic and easy to navigate.

The first user interaction with the program was quite slow as our client was adapting to the graphical interface and the actions it could perform in each window.

In the login window the user tested the functionality of the login window through a username and an encrypted password which our group proved them.

In the CRUD operations window, the user interaction wasn't fluid since he asked us about the action of eacho button and the content that it should have in each text box.

In the window to buy services, the interaction was more fluid because the design of the window was based on other online purchase pages, so the user already had some knowledge about how to handle the window.
